

THE HMAR AUTONOMY MOVEMENTS IN MIZORAM

INTRODUCTION: Mizoram is a state which is situated in the region of northeast India. It lies between East longitude $92^{\circ}15'$ to $93^{\circ}29'$ and North latitude $21^{\circ}58'$ to $24^{\circ}35'$, covering total area of 21,087 sq.kms. The Hmars are an indigenous tribal people in the Northeast India, who settle in different states of Northeast India (including Mizoram, Manipur, Assam, Meghalaya and Tripura). Hmars are generally considered to be part of the larger Mizo ethnic group, and they were the first settlers in the land of Mizo people, what is now the state of Mizoram. Till today, we can see the Hmars names of many villages and river in the Champhai area of the state bordering Myanmar. Before they were known as Old Kukis and with the arrival of the other Mizo groups, such as Lushai, Pawi, Mara and others, the Hmars spread out to the other parts of the Northeast regions: Manipur, Assam, Meghalaya and Tripura. Here in this paper we shall mainly focus on the Hmar Autonomy Movements in Mizoram to maintain their culture, their language, and their autonomy continues to this day.

Mizo Movements:

The Hmars struggles for Autonomy movements in Mizoram has its root from Mizo Movements. Towards the end of British rule in India, there was a grassroots movement in the Lushai Hills (now Mizoram, then a part of Assam) against the chieftainship system that was exploited by the British administration. This led to the formation of the Mizo Commoners Union in 1946, later renamed Mizo Union (MU). The MU also demanded the unification of all Mizo(Hmars)-inhabited areas in Manipur and Assam(including Lushai Hills) into a single administrative unit, and various units of the MU were set up outside Mizo Hills District. After India gained Independence, in 1952, the Lushai Hills Autonomous District Council of Assam, a body with significant governing powers, was formed and soon after abolished the chieftainship system. The governing body was renamed the Mizo Hills District (MHD) Council in 1954. . However, the demand for integration remained unfulfilled.

In 1959, another political movement in MHD gained momentum. The Mizo National Famine Front (MNFF), which later became Mizo National Front (MNF), protested against the indifference shown by the Assam government in handling a serious famine in the area. The main objective of the MNF later became self-determination and the establishment of 'Independent Zoram' comprising all Mizo-inhabited areas in Manipur and Assam(including Lushai Hills). This movement culminated in an armed rebellion in 1966, followed by years of underground activities. After several rounds of negotiations, the MNF signed the Mizo Accord with the Government of India on June 30, 1986. And on February 20, 1987, Mizoram became its own State under the Constitution of India; however, it did not include Mizo-inhabited areas outside MHD. Therefore, Hmars living outside Mizoram feel discontentment against these Movements, as neither of these Movements addressed their hopes and aspirations having been support and took active part in the MU- and MNF-led integration movements. This discontentment led to the growth of Hmar Autonomy Movements within Mizoram.
