

STATE OF THE ART

In partnership with the United States Census Bureau, the National Endowment for the Arts asked American adults about the impact arts and places in their lives. "One of the most important things we can do as the National Endowment for the Arts is to understand how our nation engages with the arts," says NEA Senior Deputy Chairman Joan Sigelstein. Larger segments of the population reported taking part in a host of arts activity, see below to learn about how Americans enjoy and share arts.

ATTENDING

Play attendance dropped significantly in the first two years (2009, 2010) from 2008 to 2012.

Non-arts and Hispanic Americans are less likely to attend public performances than from 2008 to 2012. In the meantime, they were increased in some categories. In 2012, African Americans indicated higher attendance rates at jazz events.

FESTIVALS SHOW PROMISE AS ENTRY POINTS TO THE ARTS. 1 in 4 young adults report attending outdoor performing arts festival in 2012.

READING

MORE THAN HALF of American adults read material (fiction, history, or nonfiction) that is not required for work or school.

Majorities of adults reading fiction or short stories, poetry, and plays reported back in 2008, however.

MEDIA CONSUMING

Young adults looking to move to the most popular form of media arts participation.

66% of adults used TV or radio to watch or listen to music. 70% used the internet to watch, listen to, or download music.

MOBILE DEVICES APPEAL TO NARROW RACIAL/ETHNIC GAPS in arts engagement. Whether listening to music, taking art photos, or watching dance or theater performances, all racial/ethnic groups show heights for some rates of engagement in mobile devices.

MAKING & SHARING

Visual drawing is the most popular form of making or sharing art. Nearly 1/3 of adults (32%) showed at meetings, clubs, or other social settings. Young adults and Hispanic Americans are the most well educated.

Four arts are also among the most popular activities in the category.
