Abstract

Background: Social media is a place for students to follow trends. However, Islamic boarding schools limit students by prohibiting them from bringing cell phones; therefore, they are not influenced by the outside world, even online. Purpose: The purpose of this study is to explore the experiences of female students as users of social media related to dormitory rules.

Methods: Using a qualitative research design with a phenomenological approach. The research was conducted by in-depth interviews with 8 female students at Madrasah Ulumul Qur'an Langsa aged 15-18 years. Interview transcripts were analyzed using the Colaizzi method.

Results: Six themes emerged from this study including: students bring cell phones to boarding schools because of the influence of friends and want to see updates, the use of social media as entertainment in their spare time, social media affects the way students follow fashion, the influence of the outside environment is more dominant on the behavior of students than the media in social media. The values instilled in the pesantren become a bulwark in the face of the outside world, and students want to make the best use of social media.

Conclusions: Female students want to make the best use of social media to atone for the violations committed. They also agree that the prohibition of bringing cell phones and access to social media in Islamic boarding schools is the right thing because it can cause negligence and jealousy in friends who do not carry cell phones.

Keywords: experience; students; social media; teenage girls

Introduction

The phenomenon is currently found that many students bring cell phones to pesantren and access social media. Access to social media conducted by students causes changes in behavior in students including those who have followed fashion on social media so that they often violate the rules by using a hijab under 130 cm.

Regarding the change in students' fashion, Wardhani (2017) argues that at this time the students who viewed that fashion is not just to cover the aurat but become part of the lifestyle. Whereas the students who should have been equipped with more religious knowledge than in public schools have different grades. The phenomenon that occurs is that students are only dressed neatly just because there are rules. When they come out, they will adopt the dress style they see.

This can happen because not all students can apply discipline, which is usually easier to do when it arises from self-awareness. Many things can affect the behavior of these students, including students who are still teenagers, carry out self-regulation and perform self-efficacy, are individuals who interact with their environment and make adjustments (Rasyid, 2020).

In order not to be judged as different or old-fashioned from their peers, students often use social media as a medium for self-actualization. They want to appear and show that students can also follow the fashion that is developing, even though the pesantren has clearly imposed a ban on the use of mobile phones and access to social media in the pesantren. According to Bukhori and Mutminati (2018), Hamid (2019), and Pradana (2019) this rule
