

AFRICA BIBLIOGRAPHY SERIES

FROM inquiries and criticisms received it seems desirable to clarify some points regarding the nature and scope of this series and to suggest ways in which it may best be used as a research tool.

It started as a card index consisting of all the entries appearing in the quarterly bibliography in the journal Africa from the beginning in 1929. (These were cut out and mounted on cards as each issue appeared.) When the subject headings in the Africa bibliography became inadequate for such a large collection of entries, the present classification was gradually worked out. It is basically geographical, with subject subdivisions. Because of the dearth of reference sources at that time, the nomenclature and classification of the tribes and languages has needed constant revision, and still remains far from satisfactory.

The card index was not originally intended for publication, but as a research tool in the Library of the International African Institute. In response to demands from abroad, and with the help of a grant from the Ford Foundation, the correction and completion of certain sections and their publication in the form of the bibliography series became possible.

The compilation of the card index has throughout been the work of our small Library staff, assisted at the revision stage by such experts as were able and willing to help us. We have worked as methodically as our resources permitted, checking bibliographies and sets of periodicals against our cards with a view to filling gaps and completing and correcting entries. We are indebted to our expert advisers for their help in this, and to those individuals who have from time to time sent additions and corrections. There are still many areas and ethnic groups on which no expert advice has been available, and we shall be grateful for contributions from people with knowledge of these. All additions and corrections received will be included in the supplements which, we hope, will eventually appear.

As indicated in the Introduction, the series is intended as a bibliographical guide rather than a complete bibliography in itself. It is obviously more useful to an advanced student, with access to library facilities, than to a beginner or anyone working out of reach of libraries. In particular, and for reasons of economy, the works listed under each individual tribe and language were not intended as complete bibliographies in themselves. The amount of repetition involved would have doubled or trebled the size of each volume. It was hoped that the general arrangement, indexing, and cross references would help the user to find, under other headings, works containing some information on the tribe in which he was interested—e.g. in the general section at the beginning of each geographical division, or under related tribes. Tribal and linguistic affiliations may be easily discovered in the Ethnographic Survey and Handbook of African Languages, with the help of the symbols given against them in the bibliography series. It was also assumed that the user would consult the specialized bibliographies on individual tribes and languages contained in the books and articles listed.

Another economy, also referred to in the Introduction, is our method of listing works on tribes and languages extending over more than one territory. These are normally all listed in one section, under one of the territories concerned, with merely a cross reference from the other territory. It occasionally happens that the cross reference is to a section in another volume. Loose sheets of many of the pages in the volumes already in print are available from the Institute, price 1s. per page.
